Produce the Cabinet. When W. D. Watson, now superintendent of school buildings, came to South Omaha twenty-two years ago he brought with him an unfinished cabinet of inlay work for Mrs. Watson, to whom he was married at the time. Watson had worked on the box during his residence on the Pacific coast. After his marriage he was so busy providing for his home that he had little time to complete the work on the box. So it lay in the attic of his home. A few days ago while instructor Bagby of the high school manual training department was expatiating on the more perfect woodwork done in present days, Watson took issue with him. Bagby called for proof. Watson rooted through his attic until he found the cover of the long forgotten box. It is about 12 1/2 inches and has 120 pieces of inlay work in it. The wood is cedar, rosewood and holly. The work is designed along cubic lines.

Said to Be Worrying. According to authority the South Omaha fire and police board is worrying its estimated self over the continued violation of the liquor laws by saloon keepers. It is true that there are some citizens who believe that the whole work might be settled if the chief of police were told to bring the guilty ones before the police magistrate and not merely report them to the board. A number of saloon men claim that they have been given special warning by the board. One saloon man who keeps his place closed Sundays, but who claims that other saloons do not, says he was called up on the phone last Sunday night and told to "be careful" by a mysterious voice which claimed to be one of the board members.

Fear Lower Wages. Packing house employees in South Omaha are becoming a bit dubious about the wage scale for laborers in the packing houses and fear that there is a possibility for the old 19-cent wage rate to go into effect for all employees because of the recent ruling that new packing house workers shall receive but 15 cents. It is feared that a universal 19-cent scale will be inaugurated, although notices posted by the packers assure the contrary.

Last spring the rate was raised from 15 cents to 20 cents after much labor trouble that brooked riotous disturbances, which were only avoided by the raise in the scale of wages. Since then, however, the packing companies have been laying off men, especially during the last month, and there is considerable feeling among the men at present.

Woodmen Elect Officers. South Omaha camp, No. 311, Woodmen of the World, elected the following officers for 1914, Wednesday evening, December 3, at McCann's hall: F. W. Faulk, consul commander; B. Kaufholz, adviser; M. Tombrink, banker; J. L. Butler, clerk; D. C. Loudan, escort; Franklin Bear, watchman; Gustave Behrke, secretary; John Kennedy, manager for three years.

The women of the First Christian church will give a Kensington tea and Home demonstration Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. N. P. Bryson, 1415 North Twenty-third street. D. A. Carpenter, aged 65 years, died last night of paralysis at his late residence, Fifteenth and H streets. Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon from Brewer's chapel at 2 o'clock. Burial in Graceland Park cemetery. Mr. Carpenter was a member of the Odd Fellows' lodge.

Mrs. Rebecca Thmen, aged 83 years, died from pneumonia at her residence, 1214 North Twenty-seventh street. She is survived by her husband and one son. Funeral services will be held from the residence Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Burial in Graceland Park cemetery.

Suits Are Brought to Secure Divorces. Emma Cadogan has asked for a divorce from Michael J. Cadogan, alleging non-support and cruelty. She asserts in her petition that he applied unprintable epithets to her and that his conduct has impaired her health. She asks that the court restore her maiden name of Emma Bischoff.

Sadie Smith asks a divorce from Orin G. Smith, saying that they were married in 1907 and that he has been guilty of cruelty, desertion and non-support. Katie Pix has secured a divorce from Thomas Pix on the charge of cruelty and non-support.

Luella F. Chards is divorced from Alfred S. Chards by the default of the latter in defending the suit. Mrs. Chards was granted the custody of their minor children, Virginia and Benjamin. A monthly allowance of $45 was ordered for the support of the children. Instead of making things pleasant for Pleasant W. Hurd, James H. Hurd deserted her and failed to support her, so Judge Troup granted the wife an absolute divorce. Non-support was also the ground upon which Clara Reedy secured a decree of divorce from Henry J. Reedy. Judge English tried the case and awarded the custody of the three minor children, Clarence, Elmer and Fae, to the mother.

The marriage of Myrtle V. and John C. Larson was annulled by Judge Troup, the wife having brought the suit and alleging non-support.

Suits Against the Theater Management. Financial embarrassments from two sources were faced by the management of the Brandels theater Wednesday. A $1,088.25 was brought in district court by the Omaha Postage service for materials and goods furnished and services rendered, but not paid for, between May 24 and November 21, the Burgess-Woodward theater company being designated as defendant. About the same time the suit was filed the stage hands at the Brandels called a temporary strike until the management paid them their wages for the past week. The matinee performance of the Sautley show was delayed until almost 3 o'clock by the striking employes, who refused to work until paid.

In district court suit is brought against theater company controlling the Brandels on two separate bills alleged to be unpaid, although past due. One is the claim of the Council Bluffs Poster Advertising company for $90.00, which had been sold to the Omaha Postage service. The other is alleged to be due the latter company and amounts to $1,097.40.

An affidavit and undertaking for an order of attachment against Joy Stuphen, treasurer of the Brandels, was filed in the office of the clerk of the district court Wednesday afternoon by the Postage Service company.

Mr. W. J. Burgess has not been contacted with the Burgess-Woodward company since March, 1911.

Artists Listen to Lecture on Art. Under the auspices of the Omaha Art club, J. Lauris Wallace at the Omaha Public library last night delivered the second in his course of six lectures on art, talking for his subject, "Different Methods of Artistic Expression."

There was a large attendance of artists and art lovers present to listen to Mr. Wallace's lecture and at the close there was a free discussion of matters pertaining to art, those in the audience asking the speaker questions which he answered. The lecture was held in the art gallery, where the speaker used numerous of the pictures to illustrate the points that he desired to bring out.

The next lecture in the Wallace course will be given at the public library the evening of December 7 and the topic will be "Comparison of the Old and Modern View Point."

Auto Repaired, But it Costs Money. That automobile repairing, when left to a repairer with indefinite instructions as to the extent of the work to be done, is expensive is indicated by a judgment for $20.40 against the T. H. Weirich Fixture company, returned by a jury in district court Wednesday. The Bertschy Garage company was plaintiff in the suit and sought payment for repairs made to the Weirich company's auto.

GRAFF FOR VOCATION BUREAU

Says Boys Have No Means of Wisely Choosing Their Work. THEY OUGHT TO BE ASSISTED

Superintendent of Schools, Talking to Mothers' Club, Asks for Free Municipal Bureau of Business Information.

Establishment of a municipal bureau of vocational guidance, which would, without expense, furnish boys and girls complete information about all businesses and occupations in the city, was recommended by E. U. Graff, superintendent of public schools, in an address to the Mothers' club of the Monmouth park school district in the school auditorium yesterday afternoon.

"What chance has the boy or girl after looking over the wide field of commercialism and industrialism to make a wise choice of occupation?" asked Superintendent Graff. "What chance would you have? What kind of business can a boy go into in this town? That's what we ought to know and the boys ought to be given the fullest information about the business they intend to follow.

"We are inclined to shunt the boy into the easiest groove and there he will find himself, often after he has grown gray, without any opportunity to advance, no chance of promotion, his wages in no way proportionate to his qualifications.

How Can He Choose? "Because there is no method by which a boy can wisely choose the kind of work he wants to do I believe a vocational guidance bureau is necessary and should be established. There a boy about to enter into commercial work could learn what kind of factories there are in the town, what kinds of business, the number of business and factory operatives, the chances for promotion, the qualifications necessary to be successful in any particular business.

"Business generally is done behind locked doors. The employees in these businesses are recruited from men who know nothing about the actual work and who find it entirely different from what they imagined. It would be of inestimable value if they knew."

Superintendent Graff spoke of the modern trend toward organized instruction, showing how the school had gradually usurped the prerogatives of the home until now the child is taught "cooking, sewing, how to work and how to play" in institutions. For this reason he urged the necessity of parents, in order to keep acquainted with the progress of education, to co-operate with school authorities in the organization of mothers' clubs or similar organizations.

Miss Edith Tobitt, city librarian, addressed the club. She said the children ought to be encouraged to buy books, for it is better to own a few good books than to rent many. She said:

"I regret to say that some patrons of the library read many books but remember little or nothing of what they read. The children ought to be taught to think about what they read and they ought to be helped in choosing good books to read."

"The Jews and the Italians seem to instinctively select the best books to read."

Miss Tobitt spoke with regret of the large number of magazines purchased and said one or two 10c magazines each month ought to be sufficient and that the remainder of the money usually spent for magazines should be expended for good books.

Referring to the circulating libraries Miss Tobitt commended the idea of "book wagons" in the country, which supply a large number of people with reading matter and could supply many more if the wagons were more numerous.

This was the first meeting of the Monmouth Park Mothers' club, as it has just been organized.
